Ireland's Sacred Oak.
In years gone by Ireland had a sacred oak dedicated to St. Columbanus one of the peculiarities of the tree being that whoever carried a small bit of the wood or bark in his mouth would never need with a violent death, it being especially efficacious in saving Christian martyrs from the block. It was known throughout the British Isles as the holy oak of Kenmare. After the lapse of many centuries this sacred oak was uprooted by a storm, after which it was said to be guarded by angels to keep heretics from gathering the wood for fuel. At last a wicked timber "barked" one of its largest limbs and caused some leather, which made into shoes for himself, imagining that such relics would bring him wealth and power. He wore them but once, however, but that one time was enough to make him an incurable leper.

British Museum Dome.
The reading room of the British museum is crowned by a spacious dome which is about thirty feet wider than that of St. Paul's cathedral. It is 14 feet in diameter and with its 60,000 superficial feet of glass, spans more than 100 feet in height. Neither St. Peter's at Rome nor Santa Maria at Florence is a match to it. It is larger by forty-five feet than the dome of the capitol at Washington by thirty-five feet than that of Darmstadt cathedral, by thirty-three feet than that of St. Sophia, Constantinople, and spreads sixteen feet further than the concave roof of the tomb of Mohammed Adil Shah at Bijapur.

The Man Who Is In Earnest.
The vital necessity for the qualities of inspiration, reality and magnetism was brought home to me when I was a schoolboy attending at college functions. I saw speakers who came forward and who—well, just spoke so many words. Then would come an orator, a man who acted the part, who lived the part, who was the part because he believed it, and so swept the people off their feet—J. P. Sousa in London Interview.

Our Occupation Less.
A visitor at a small resort on the coast says the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune asked one of the men whom he saw at the village store what he did all summer.
"Lout and fish," replied the native.
"What do you do in the winter?" continued the inquiring visitor.
"We don't fish!"
